

Using web-service backed fields

Question :

- I want a way to allow people to suggest improvements to my blogposts.
- My blogposts are available in JSON. Visitors should be able to pick a blogpost, and then provide a corrected version of the post.
- For that they will pick a blogpost from a dropdown that is populated by the JSON.
- When they pick a post, the field with the corrected content is automatically filled with the corresponding text.
- They can edit the text and submit.
- In the overview you want to be able to see both the original (current) text and the proposed text.

Approach

- Set up webservice :
 - Add the URL to the global allowlist.
 - In conforms administration : Create a Webservice (dummyjson.com.posts) connection to the JSON : <https://dummyjson.com/posts>
 - test the connection
- Create a form
 - create a field "postid" definition of type : webservice dropdown
 - select service dummyjson.com.posts
 - take ID as id, title as label
 - create a textarea field "body"
- Add a conform rule to the form
 - Track the field "postid", and choose "set value" as action. body=[entry.postid.body]
- Add a tableview showing both the stored entry (body) as the referenced body (postid.body)

Just remove it

Hopes and dreams were dashed that day. It should have been expected, but it still came as a shock. The warning signs had been ignored in favor of the possibility, however remote, that it could actually happen. That possibility had grown from hope to an undeniable belief it must be destiny. That was until it wasn't and the hopes and dreams came crashing down.
